is becoming even more than champions as it faces what can only be described as a huge lack of understanding through-out all walks of life concerning mental illness. I listened to a testimonial that both moved me and left me wondering what would have happened to a young man had it not been for the Beacon House staff. Would someone else have understood and helped, or would he have been cast from

I becoming a player on the Washington political scene. When Boggs announced her retirement in 1990, she was the only Lindy white representing Boggs a black-majority district in Congress. "I am proud to have played a small role in opening doors for blacks and women," she said at the time. As family tragedy brought her in to Congress, so did it usher her out. At the time of her July 1990 an
